

Daughter Of Cambodia Reunites With The Sister She Left Behind

In 1975, the Khmer Rouge took control of Cambodia and began a reign of terror that would last for four years. During that time, an estimated 1.7 million people were killed, including Loung Ung's parents and two of her sisters. Loung and her three surviving siblings were forced to flee their home and live in the jungle, where they faced starvation, disease, and the constant threat of violence.

In 1979, the Vietnamese invaded Cambodia and overthrew the Khmer Rouge. Loung and her siblings were able to return home, but they were left with nothing. Their house had been destroyed, and their family was gone. Loung and her siblings struggled to rebuild their lives, but they never gave up hope of finding each other.

In 2000, Loung finally reunited with her sister Chou. Chou had been living in the United States for many years, and she had no idea that Loung had survived the Khmer Rouge. The reunion was a joyous occasion, and it was a testament to the enduring power of family and the resilience of the human spirit.

Loung's story is an inspiration to us all. It shows us that even in the darkest of times, we can never give up hope. Family is the most important thing in our lives, and it is worth fighting for.
