Early Life and Career

Manfred von Richthofen was born in Breslau, Germany, in 1892. He was the son of a wealthy landowner and army officer. Richthofen joined the German army in 1911 and served in the cavalry. At the outbreak of World War I, he transferred to the air service.

Richthofen quickly proved to be a skilled pilot and a natural fighter. He scored his first aerial victory in September 1916, and by the end of the war, he had become the leading ace of all the combatants.

The Red Baron

Richthofen's nickname, the "Red Baron," came from the color of his plane. He flew a Fokker Dr.I triplane that was painted bright red. The Red Baron became a legend among both the German and Allied forces. He was known for his daring and skill, and he was feared by his enemies.

Richthofen's most famous victory came in April 1918, when he shot down the British ace Albert Ball. Ball was one of the most successful British pilots of the war, and his death was a major blow to the Royal Flying Corps.

Death and Legacy

Manfred von Richthofen was killed in action on April 21, 1918. He was shot down by a British fighter pilot named Arthur Roy Brown. Richthofen was just 25 years old at the time of his death.

Richthofen's death was a major propaganda victory for the Allies. He was the most famous German pilot of the war, and his death was seen as a sign that the German air force was on the verge of collapse.

Richthofen's legacy as a fighter pilot is secure. He was one of the most successful and skilled pilots of all time. His courage and daring have made him a legend, and he continues to be an inspiration to pilots around the world.
