Turkey starts by fluffing up his feathers. Then he uses his beak to make a mask. He looks in a mirror and smiles. He looks just like a turkey!

Turkey is so happy with his disguise. He can't wait to go trick-or-treating now. He runs to the door and opens it.

But when Turkey gets outside, he realizes that he's not the only one who's dressed up. All of the other animals are wearing costumes too!

Turkey is starting to feel self-conscious. He doesn't want to be the only one who's not wearing a real costume. But then he remembers that he's a turkey. And turkeys are supposed to have feathers.

Turkey takes a deep breath and walks up to the first house. He knocks on the door and waits. A moment later, the door opens and a little girl smiles at him.

"Trick or treat," Turkey says.

The little girl laughs. "You're the cutest turkey I've ever seen!" she says. She gives Turkey a big bag of candy.

Turkey is so happy. He's glad that he didn't let his fear of being different stop him from going trick-or-treating. He knows that he's a special turkey, and he's proud of who he is.

Turkey continues to trick-or-treat, and he has a great time. He gets lots of candy, and he makes lots of new friends. He even wins a prize for the best costume!

When Turkey gets home, he's exhausted, but he's also very happy. He had a wonderful Thanksgiving, and he can't wait to do it again next year.
