About the Galapagos Islands

The Galapagos Islands are a group of 19 islands located in the Pacific Ocean, about 600 miles west of Ecuador. The islands are known for their unique wildlife, which includes giant tortoises, marine iguanas, and sea lions. The Galapagos Islands are also a UNESCO World Heritage Site.

The islands were formed by volcanic eruptions millions of years ago. The volcanic activity has created a diverse landscape that includes beaches, volcanoes, and rainforests.

The Galapagos Islands are home to a variety of plant and animal life. The islands are home to over 9,000 species of plants and animals, many of which are found nowhere else on Earth.

Planning Your Trip

The best time to visit the Galapagos Islands is during the dry season, which runs from May to October. During the dry season, the weather is mild and there is less rain.

There are a number of different ways to get to the Galapagos Islands. You can fly from Quito, Ecuador, or from Guayaquil, Ecuador. You can also take a boat from Ecuador.

Once you arrive in the Galapagos Islands, there are a number of different ways to get around. You can take a boat tour, a land tour, or a combination of both.

There are a number of different tour operators that offer Galapagos Islands tours. When choosing a tour operator, it is important to consider your budget, your interests, and your fitness level.
